LETTER FROM COL. GIBSON.

CAMP FRY, KY., Feb. 22.

Eds. Tribune:

Here we are in Camp Fry. It is twenty-two miles from Bowling Green, and twenty in advance of Camp Wood. Here is a splendid estate of 3,000 acres, finely improved, belonging to two young men who were captured with the rebel prisoners at Fort Donelson.

It is about two miles from Diamond Cave, and the same distance from the "cave of a hundred domes," whilst it is but seven to Mammoth Cave, so long the wonder of the world. In our camp in Bella's Tavern, where hundreds of pleasant soldiers have hitherto slept in the Summer. At Mammoth Cave is another large hotel, the furniture of which was despoiled by the rebels. At Cave City, four miles north, was a fine hotel which they burned. The Woodland Hotel kept by W. Ritter and eight miles from these caves, is the place to "halt." The old man, with his noble wife and three splendid daughters, are generous, cordial and earnest patriots.

On the 10th I accompanied Gen. Johnson and escort, with a flag of truce, with in about three miles of place. We met Major Harrison of Texas and near two hundred Rangers. It was an interesting meeting to me. This was before General Mitchell advanced, and the rebel forces were nine miles this side of Bowling Green, under Hindman.

The object of Gen. Johnson was to arrange for an exchange of prisoners.

It was agreed that Col. Johnson and Hindman should meet the following Friday, but Mitchell advanced, and the rebel retired to Dixie.

Among the Rangers were many fine heads, and all appeared polite and cordial. They were very free in conversation and showed that they would "never come under the old government." They exhibited great enthusiasm and unbounded confidence in their leader. They were all comfortably clothed, but no one was in uniform. Their horses were inferior Tennessee and Kentucky stock, but the equipment was good. These Rangers brought no horses from Texas. Every man had a blanket and oil cloth, the latter in many instances being table cloths.

Each man had two or three revolvers, of the old style, and either a shot gun or

RECORD OF VALLANDIGHAM.

Last April the rebels commenced a war against the government of the United States. The President put together what was left of the army and navy, and called out 75,000 volunteers to suppress the rebellion, recapture and protect the property of the Union. Subsequently the Presi-
